

Artist: Tumpa Chakraborty

Tumpa Chakraborty, a distinguished visual artist from West Bengal, has cultivated a robust foundation in painting that spans over a decade, particularly excelling in large-scale murals. Her educational background is rooted in the prestigious domain of Visual Arts, where she holds both a Bachelor's and a Master's degree with a specialization in Painting. This academic foundation has equipped Tumpa with the technical expertise and creative vision necessary to undertake and excel in her mural projects, which have garnered widespread acclaim across India.

Tumpa's work is deeply intertwined with the rich tapestry of India's indigenous art forms. Her fascination with traditional motifs from art styles such as Santhal, Patachitra, Saura, Kalighat, Pitkar, and Madhubani paintings, is evident in her murals. These art forms, with their simple yet captivating designs, encapsulate centuries of culture and heritage. By incorporating these motifs into her murals, Tumpa not only pays homage to these traditions but also brings them into the contemporary public space, making them accessible to a broader audience.

The murals created by Tumpa are not just artworks; they are vibrant canvases of cultural exchange. They transform public walls into vivid windows that offer passersby a glimpse into India's dynamic artistic heritage. Her motifs, while deeply personal, resonate with the larger indigenous consciousness, reflecting a harmonious blend of her individual artistic expression and the collective cultural memory. Tumpa's commitment to reviving and promoting indigenous art forms through her murals positions her as a pivotal figure in the contemporary Indian art scene.
